Note: The phrase 'had been trapped' is used in the past perfect tense to indicate that the trapping of plastic and waste by ocean currents occurred before a specific point in the past, likely before the estimation of 79,000 tons of plastic in 2010. It suggests that the trapping happened earlier in time relative to the other events mentioned. In this context, it implies that the trapping of plastic and waste occurred prior to the estimation of its quantity and highlights the continuous accumulation of waste in the Great Pacific Garbage Patch over time.
