AUDIO SCRIPT

Ray: I went somewhere amazing last week – a recording studio! Not somewhere I'd ever thought I'd go, to be honest, and it was great. As you know, I'm interested in going into the music industry when I'm older. I love playing the guitar. I'd need to be much better at it to be a professional guitarist, though. I used to think that being a DJ would be great – getting paid to play records and listen to them – but what really interests me now is the idea of being a sound technician – and I'll tell you why.

Last week – you know it was the school holidays – well I was staying at my cousin's – he lives on the coast, so it's really cool at his place and I often go and stay during the holidays. Well that's when I was invited to go to the recording studio! We were having dinner, and my cousin and I were talking about music and things like that. My aunt was listening, and she works in advertising. She said she was doing something for a recording studio, and asked me if I'd like to go there for the day! She said she had a good friend who worked there, called Kate, and she'd ask her if I could spend some time with her while they were actually doing a recording. I was just so excited!

The studio's quite far from where I live – it's near the main train station in the next town. So the morning after I got back home, I got up really early to catch the bus there. I was standing at the bus stop when I saw my best friend's dad driving past. He stopped and gave me a lift because he works in the next town near the station.

So that was a good start to the day!

I had a great time there, seeing how they do stuff like recording the voices and the instruments separately – I must say, there were plenty of retakes! And they showed me how they do mastering to even out the sound after the recording, that sort of thing. It was really interesting. Kate, who took me round, was just so nice, and she gave me some advice. She said she was sure I already know loads about music and watch plenty of bands online – but if I really wanted to achieve my goals, I ought to work hard at school, that was the most important thing. She said people in the entertainment industry don't just go to lots of concerts and go to parties with celebrities, it's about more than that and you need to be good at what you do.

I haven't stopped talking about it since, and it's given me so much to think about. It's one of the most exciting things that's ever happened to me! They said I could send them a video of me playing the guitar, they'd like to see it – but I know they were just being kind. I've made one, but haven't sent it yet. I started to write an email to them to thank them, but then I thought a postcard would be nicer, so I got one, wrote a couple of things on it and posted it to them yesterday.

Maria: Hi Ben, did you hear about that actor yesterday who went...

Ben: No, Maria:, I didn't, and to be honest, I don't want to.

Maria: OK, OK. But why not? It's only natural to be interested in other people's lives.

Ben: Maybe, but I don't understand why everybody wants to talk about people they don't even know. I think that's strange!

Maria: I really don't agree. In my opinion, famous people are just like everybody else. I mean, a lot of the difficulties they have in life are different, but they're still humans. They need to eat, sleep, they get bored sometimes, they need friends...

Ben: Yeah, but that still doesn't explain why some people seem to be as interested in celebrities they've never met as they are in their own friends!

Maria: Well yes, maybe you're right, it is a bit strange. But I suppose you can find out lots of things about them on the internet, so you can begin to feel that you actually know them.

Ben: Yes, but all that information about them online doesn't mean you know what they're really like. It's just an image.

Maria: That's true, but on social media you can find lots of conversations between stars and their fans. The stars answer questions and are often very honest, I think.

Ben: I'm not sure... I think they're very careful about what they say.

Maria: But don't you think that when we see all the great things they've done, it makes us want to do better ourselves? I really believe it makes people aim higher in life! Or even just do things they wouldn't think of trying if they didn't see celebrities doing them.

Ben: Perhaps some people feel like that, but I think your friends, your family, your teachers are the people who should help you decide what to do in life, don't you?

Maria: Of course! But celebrities have an effect too. They need to behave well in public – I mean they have responsibilities because so many people watch what they do, especially young kids. They always need to think about that.

Ben: Well if you have a lot of fans, yes, you do need to remember that there will always be someone watching you, wherever you are. That must be difficult. I'd hate not to be able to go out without people taking my photograph, or wanting to talk to me.

Maria: But it's not all bad, is it? I wouldn't mind people knowing about me because I'd done something really special, or was really good at something.

I'd feel proud. And I'd enjoy the good things about it, like meeting interesting people, travelling all over the world. It would be great to have so many opportunities.

Ben: Yeah, I'm sure you're right. But I still don't understand why people are so interested in them. I love watching films, but I don't need to know all about the actors' personal lives...

- Ben: No, Maria:, I didn't, and to be honest, I don't want to.
- Maria: OK, OK. But why not? It's only natural to be interested in other people's lives.
- Ben: Maybe, but I don't understand why everybody wants to talk about people they don't even know. I think that's strange!
- Maria: I really don't agree. In my opinion, famous people are just like everybody else. I mean, a lot of the difficulties they have in life are different, but they're still humans. They need to eat, sleep, they get bored sometimes, they need friends...
- Ben: Yeah, but that still doesn't explain why some people seem to be as interested in celebrities they've never met as they are in their own friends!
- Maria: Well yes, maybe you're right, it is a bit strange. But I suppose you can find out lots of things about them on the internet, so you can begin to feel that you actually know them.
- Ben: Yes, but all that information about them online doesn't mean you know what they're really like. It's just an image.
- Maria: That's true, but on social media you can find lots of conversations between stars and their fans. The stars answer questions and are often very honest, I think.
- Ben: I'm not sure... I think they're very careful about what they say.
- Maria: But don't you think that when we see all the great things they've done, it makes us want to do better ourselves? I really believe it makes people aim higher in life! Or even just do things they wouldn't think of trying if they didn't see celebrities doing them.
- Ben: Perhaps some people feel like that, but I think your friends, your family, your teachers are the people who should help you decide what to do in life, don't you?
- Maria: Of course! But celebrities have an effect too. They need to behave well in public – I mean they have responsibilities because so many people watch what they do, especially young kids. They always need to think about that.
- Ben: Well if you have a lot of fans, yes, you do need to remember that there will always be someone watching you, wherever you are. That must be difficult. I'd hate not to be able to go out without people taking my photograph, or wanting to talk to me.
- Maria: But it's not all bad, is it? I wouldn't mind people knowing about me because I'd done something really special, or was really good at something.

I'd feel proud. And I'd enjoy the good things about it, like meeting interesting people, travelling all over the world. It would be great to have so many opportunities.

- Ben: Yeah, I'm sure you're right. But I still don't understand why people are so interested in them. I love watching films, but I don't need to know all about the actors' personal lives...

AUDIO SCRIPT

Narrator: 1

Amy: Social media is an important part of everyone's lives these days. Or at least it is for everyone I know. I suppose, if I'm honest, I probably waste quite a lot of time every day on social networking sites. You know, checking what all my friends are doing, chatting, looking at their photos – they take a lot when they're bored! But it's really important for me – it's how I know what they're all doing and communicate with them. I live on a farm in the countryside and I can't actually see them that much outside school. So without it, I'd be quite bored – though I'd probably do my homework more carefully!

Narrator: 2

Brian: Well I use two social networking sites, probably for about three hours a day in total. It's not that much, really – that's what most of my friends do – it's normal, and even fashionable to communicate online. It's a lot of fun, and you're always up to date with what's going on. But I do wonder why some people put so many pictures on the sites – it's impossible to look at them all, so it's a bit silly, I think, to just keep on uploading more and more. They're really not very interesting after a while. The quality of what they put online would probably be better, too, if people chose them more carefully.

Narrator: 3

Carol: I use social media, like most of my friends and at the moment we can't imagine life without it. But, and this isn't a view many people share, I think that because there are so many new developments in technology all the time – it won't be long before people move on to another way of communicating with each other. People are easily bored and start looking for more exciting things. The social media industry is huge now, but I really don't think it will last. I don't know what will replace it, though. I'm just looking forward to using it!

Narrator: 4

David: Everybody knows the social media industry is a big success story, and whatever type of job you hope to go into, social networking will probably be part of it in some way or another. I'd like to be a journalist, and I already write reviews of things I've seen at the theatre or the cinema or concerts and post them on different sites. I like to find out what my friends' opinions of these things are, too – so I love reading what they say about them online. I think people are often more honest about things on social media. That's one of the great things about it!

Narrator: 5

Emma: I don't use social media as much as some people I know, but some of my cousins live abroad, so it's a good way for me to keep in touch with them. My friends and I do a lot of sport, so we see each other at training and matches. I have to spend most of the rest of my time doing school work. I do like looking at photos and videos of sports events that my friends have filmed and uploaded, though, and some of my sister's friends have set up a social networking site focusing on sport. I'd love to work for them when I'm older.
